Excerpt from A Treatise on the Law of Dower: Particularly With a View to the Modern Practice of Conveyancing IN treating of Dower, it has been customary to consider it as founded on the three successive circumstances of Marriage, Seisin, and Death Of the Husband. The concurrence of the two former is properly the ground-work of the title Of dower; the latter is its consummation. This chronological arrangement having at least the convenience of Obviousness, has been here followed. The subject of Marriage, so far as it is connected with the law of Dower, is Open to considerations which call for some degree of attention and discrimination on the part of the student, and may even exercise the acuteness of the experienced lawyer. The obvious business Of the present treatise is rather to point out the principles and distinctions which are to be borne in mind in applying the numerous cases on marriage to questions of Dower, than to enter upon any substantive discussion of the cases themselves.
