Not illustrated. 1857 Excerpt: . of Tycho Brahe, it is said that he applied himself to astronomy from admiration of the science in consequence of the occurrence (in 1724) of a great eclipse of the sun at the time, which had been predicted. It is added that an itinerant pedlar and fortune-teller instructed him at the same time in the mysteries of judicial astrology, and this art he occasionally practised during several years. While yet a stripling he married a woman about fifty years of age, the widow of a tailor and the mother of two children, of whom the younger was his senior by two years; all the family however appear to have lived together in harmony, Simpson working at his trade by day, and increasing his income by keeping a private school in the evenings. In 1733 he went to reside at Derby, where he continued to follow the united avocations of weaver and schoolmaster, and where he found means to increase his knowledge of mathematics. With arithmetic, geometry, and algebra he was already acquainted; and now, having obtained a loan of Stone s translation of the Marquis de l Hopital s Analyse des Innimens Petite, he was enabled by the force of genius and unremitting application to make himself master of the direct and inverse method of fluxions. Being thus qualified he began in or before the year 1735 to write answers to the mathematical questions in the Ladies Diury, and eveu to propose questions for solution...
