Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .PRAISE for JERK VERY interesting read . thoroughly entertaining! -- Michael Smerconish, Sirius XM Radio . GOOD stuff from the TV trenches! -- New York Daily News . ENTERTAINING and insightful . a great book! -- WNET/Ch.13, New York NATIONALLY known TV columnist Adam Buckman provides a very personal history of television in JERK: How I Wasted My Life Watching Television. With a title inspired by an angry reader who mailed him one of his newspaper columns with the word Jerk scrawled over his column photo, JERK is a hilarious and poignant insider's tour of the TV business. It features dozens of never-before-told anecdotes about TV's biggest stars - Jerry Seinfeld, David Letterman, Jay Leno, Howard Stern, Katie Couric and many more. JERK goes behind-the-scenes with TV's most unforgettable characters - actors, actresses, news anchors, game show hosts, comedians, kiddie show icons, talk-show hosts, producers, writers, network executives, publicists and more - and reveals what they might not want you to know. JERK traces the epic evolution of television from the 1980s to the present: The explosion of TV channels, the shattering of long-standing taboos, the four-star hits and the zero-star stinkers. Written by a keen observer of the TV business who has had a front-row seat for more than three decades, JERK: How I Wasted My Life Watching Television is like no other TV book you have ever read.
