Scotland was cursed by witches and in 1649, the witch panic was at its peak. No-one was safe from the executioner s flames. Below the imposing behemoth of Edinburgh castle, nineteen year old Nessie Macleod is forced to watch her mother, Isabelle, burn to death for witchcraft. Her mother s crime stains her more than the ashes that scatter across the Esplanade. Shunned by Edinburgh s townsfolk, she s also hounded by the witch pricker, John Brodie. Brodie killed her mother and now he s coming for her. The daughter of a witch is always a witch. When old Annie Dickson is accused of cursing the flescher s pigs through witchcraft, she suffers for days at Brodie s hands before betraying three women and starting a witch hunt that sees one woman killed and another executed before the baying town. Nessie is lured to Greyfriars Kirkyard, where she s haunted by the ghosts of the women burned for witchcraft. They want revenge on Brodie and his men. Nessie learns her grandmother was executed during the North...
