Although the agricultural advantages of Mississippi are made the prominent feature of this pamphlet, factories, and especially small factories of almost every kind, will find better opportunities for location and a better local market for their products here than in almost any other section of the country. With our unlimited supplies of timber in the greatest variety, with clays suited to the manufacture of brick, tile, and every grade of pottery, with our immense fields of cotton, with abundant water power, cheap fuel, and inexpensive labor, this state offers unequalled facilities for manufactories of every kind. The cotton factories which have been in constant operation at Columbus, Wesson, Enterprise and at other points in this state have demonstrated that cotton cloths can be made here at a profit when many of the mills in New England are obliged to suspend because unable to pay running expenses, and the establishment of additional factories here is attracting more and more attention. The cotton mills at Water Valley have been in constant...
