Excerpt from The Crimson and Gray, Vol. 4: December, 1920 The crimson and gray wishes its readers all the joy and happiness of the Christmas season. For the majority of us, our school year has been a success, and we can enjoy our holidays with a light heart. For those of us who have been less fortunate, or rather less industrious, the new year is a golden gate of opportunity. When school opens once more we shall have ushered. In the year nineteen-twenty one, with all its duties, and its pleasures, its joys and its sorrows. A New Year is like a new. Book with every page a blank whereon we may write what we will. In the book of our New Year let us strive to record only those things which we shall never be ashamed to see again. If we keep that idea in mind we will be care ful What we do; we will remember that every act of ours, no matter how insignificant, has some in?uence for good or evil on our neighbor.
