I heard the conductor say that an engine had been sent for, and though the distance is not so very great, i will have to keep out of the way of other trains, and that takes time. How much you know! the woman said in a kind of despairing admiration. No, indeed; Eleanor disclaimed, but I live on this line, and go over this part of it very often. What shall I do The worries piled up again. It seems as if I couldnt gn to a hotel alone. I can not get to my sons till the middle of the night, and they expect me before dark. Emcline telegraphed, and they dont know that shes not with me. At this point Eleanor began to think rapidly. Might she, dare she, ask this dear perplexed lady to...
