The cost of the benefits would be divided probably forty per cent to the employers, forty per cent to the employe and twenty per cent to the state. Benefits would be provided as follows: (a) Medical and surgical attendance and treatment. (b) Nursing. (c) Hospital treatment. (d) Laboratory facilities. (e) Medical and surgical supplies. (f) Dentistry. (g) Obstetrical service and maternity benefits. (h) Cash sickness benefits to insured. (i) Cash sickness benefits to dependents, (j) Funeral benefits. Has Failed in Europe. If the system would do what is claimed for it the cost should not and would not long be considered a valid argument against its adoption in this country, but official figures indicate that in Germany, where the sysr tern has been in operation since 1883, the sickness rate is higher than in the United States. In England the experience is too brief to be of any value. In Germany and Austria it not only has failed to reduce the number of cases of sickness or the duration thereof, but the authorities agree that there has been a decided increase in both. Extent of the Movement. In this country, investigating commissions have been appointed in nine states, and an effort is being made to have a federal commission appointed. The compulsory health insurance measure has twice been defeated in the legislatures of New York and Massachusetts, also by the Massachusetts constitutional convention....
