Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Venice Impressions of Venice may be compared to a brilliant heap of her own many-coloured beads, which a child may play with, count, or string, according to mood or temperament. The first course bespeaks a traveller wise enough to loaf contentedly, morning, noon, and night, on Lagoon or Canal, simply absorbing and enjoying Venice. The second, one who, having posted all the items of Baedeker's day-book into his mental ledger, closes his account against the City in the Sea with a big balance of facts and figures on the profit side. The third, him who, with the kindly aid of Sismondi and Brown, Vasari and Burckhardt, strings some of his brighter beads of memory upon a few homespun threads, to form reminders of unique joys, tasted in faery lands forlorn. Such toys can please others only upon condition that they do not burden the loafer; distract the precisian; or try to teach the unclassed tourist what he ought to think and feel about Venice.
