When the sacred scriptures, or bibles, of Arabia, China, Persia and India were discovered a change began to take place in the attitude of Christians toward the non-Christian faiths of these countries, a change that has meant a remarkable increase of tolerance, catholicity and appreciation. In 711 when the Moors of Northern Africa invaded Spain, it was rumored that these Mohammedans had a book which they described as the word of God and of which they said an exact copy exists in heaven. In the course of the next few centuries the book was translated into the chief languages of Europe and is known to us as the Koran. In the fourteenth century certain European travellers found their way to a rich and thickly populated country which they called Cathay. Returning they reported on conditions in what proved to be the oldest existing empire and which they now pronounced China. They told of the immense literary productions of the people and more especially...
