Wisconsin granite varies in color from deep red to white or gray, takes a high polish and is ranked high in the markets of the country. A most important economic use of granite is for road material, such as paving blocks and macadam. Granite paving blocks are similar in shape to common bricks, though larger, and are laid in cement in the street so as to make a very durable pavement for large cities. In some years the granite paving block industry of Wisconsin exceeds that of any other state in the Union. The principal quarries for paving blocks are at Berlin (J 11), Red Granite (J 11) and Montello (H 12). Granite is also quarried and prepared for use at Wausau, Amberg (L 6), Marinette and other places. Limestone Industry. In the limestone regions of...
