Returning to the West Country after their latest adventure in London, lady's maid Verity Hunter and cook Joan Hart are ready to embrace a quieter life. Their mistress, the glamorous young heiress Dorothy Drew, is attempting to rein in her enthusiasm for too many cocktails and takes up the offer of a place to rest and recuperate from an old family friend, Mrs Ashford. All seems well, until the day after they arrive, when everyone in the house is struck down by what appears to be mushroom poisoning. The deadly dish proves fatal for one unlucky soul. As Verity and Joan begin to delve deeper into the tangled relationships of the Ashford family and their guests, it becomes apparent that too many people have secrets to keep some of which are worth killing for. Smart and active, but in a believable way. You don't ever wonder how they could do what they do within the confines of their social roles and their real jobs are never thrown to the side. Celina makes her characters someone you care about. I enjoyed this book and I am looking forward to the next book in the series. I would recommend this book...
