These doctrines may be found in the Roman Catholic Catechism, in the elaborate compilation of Lord Shrewsbury, and the Essence of Religious Controversy, by the Rev. Dr. William Henry Coombes. Dr. Coombes declares, in his exposition of the tenets of the Church of Rome, that nothing but fair argument and real learning shall induce him to notice an opponents answer: and the noble lord displays a similar independence of the holy and beautiful simplicity which belongs to the word of God. With every feeling of respect to the erudition of these eminent scholars, we must lament their contempt or omission of divine testimony, and their attachment to writings which are not only uninspired, but in some cases neither genuine nor authentic. If we decline this armor which we have not proved, and bring with us only the Holy Scriptures, shall it be said to us in reply, Am I a dog, that thou comest out tome with these It can scarcely, however, be expected that the highly endowed, who are thus defied to the contest, will again reply to the ten-times-told traditions of a darker age--the humblest acquirement would be sufficient to prove their errors; and though the following notes are not appropriate to critical and voluminous discussion, yet they may briefly touch upon one or two passages of the controversy, as illustrative of the merits of the argument. Dr. Coombes asserts that the Catechist (whose formulary...
