Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Microscopes and Accessories Every department is in perfect communication with every other department by means of the Bell internal telephone system, requiring thirty miles of wires and having forty stations. From the central station one may not only communicate with every part of the works, but with every portion of the civilized world reached by telegraph, cable, or long-distance telephone. Warmth and ventilation are secured by a hot-air apparatus, delivering cubic feet of air per minute, to heat which two and a half miles of steam pipes are required. These are the nerves and arteries of our manufactory, and serve simply to outline the extensive equipment of delicate and accurate machinery absolutely necessary in order to produce a grade of work which will test up to the high optical and mechanical standards which we have established.
