Xulon Press, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. p.p1 Does it matter which religion one practices or god one worships? Do all religious roads lead to the same eternal destiny? Are all founders of religious movements to be esteemed with equal respect? In Christianity in the Courtroom, author Les Brittingham seeks to answer these questions and more, as he takes the reader on a systematic journey of discovering and defending the Christian faith. Les believes that all Christ followers should be prepared to offer intelligent and reasonable answers to those who are questioning the credibility and veracity of their beliefs. In a secular world that is growing increasingly hostile of Christianity, it is imperative that believers step up with confidence to not only demonstrate the reliability of their faith, but also be able to express why Jesus Christ is the only hope for a dying world. In this book, relevant topics such as the uniqueness of Christianity, the nature of apologetics, the existence of God, the reliability of the biblical documents, the problem of evil, and the evidence for the historical existence and supernatural nature of Jesus Christ are discussed in a scholarly, yet easy-to-read format. A compelling case is made that all religions are not the same and that Jesus Christ is the ultimate standard of truth by which all religious thought should be measured. Whether you are a follower of Christ seeking to strengthen your faith and confidence in what you believe, or a skeptic who is asking honest questions about Christianity, you will find Christianity in the Courtroom a valuable resource. p.p1 Les Brittingham is the author of numerous biblical study books including a popular eschatological trilogy: Taking a Second Look at the Second Coming, Decoding Daniel, and...
