Before scouting the area, he is cooking his first meal at the new camp site when he is interrupted by an old woman that s out scrounging for rabbit. Somehow he had managed to select a campsite that was just over the hill from a family who had become lost when their wagon had broken down in the wilderness several years earlier. They hadn t seen any white men in that time and the Indians frightened them when they saw them. After meeting the family of gypsies from the old country, it is agreed he will stay the winter and even teach the lost family how to live in the mountains while providing them with venison. While scouting the area one day, Tom finds an Indian trail. On his way back, he startles...
