The late entrance and the frequently interrupted attendance of small children in the consolidated school tend to give the grades a wider range in age, and the bulk of membership in these grades is distributed quite proportionately in numbers to three years, and noticeably in the sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth grades to four years. In the district schools, over-ageness is greatest in the sixth, seventh, and eighth grades, no doubt due largely to the convenience and value of child labor on the farm, a factor which should be considered also in connection with the consolidated school. The fact that ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth grade pupils are shown in the district school townships is accounted for by the presence...
