R. 962, the Economic Growth and Financial Institutions Regulatory Paperwork Reduction Act of 1993: Thursday, September 23, 1993 Chairman Neal. I would like to call the subcommittee to order at this time. And I would like to welcome everyone to today's hearing on regulatory reform and credit availability, and on H. R. 962, the bill dealing with this issue that has been introduced by Mr. Be reuter and Mr. Bacchus. Last week we heard from representatives of banking and consumer groups. All agree on the broad goals that regulation should be more effective, less costly, less burdensome, while assuring a safe and sound banking system, bringing credit available to all creditworthy borrowers. I believe these principles must guide us as we examine our system for regulating financial institutions in this country. Last night, President Clinton spoke on health care. For one of the points he made in his film of simplifying the system, he told how doctors at one hospital spend so much time filling out forms that they can see 200 fewer patients a year. He told how one hospital administrator spends $200 million a year on paperwork that has nothing to do with treating patients.
