Charlie Reynolds is having a lousy forty-something birthday. The only gift she expects is the pair of cream and bronze cowboy boots she bought herself, but a cake made by the local diner s proprietor, and an embarrassing moment, no make that two moments, make for an unexpected day. Divorced and lonely, she soon discovers after meeting the new veterinarian that her libido isn t dead. Lusting after the tall and handsome doctor is only a dream because she s sworn off men. Besides, no way would he be interested in her, a plain old woman ready to be put out to pasture. Or so she thinks. Zach Callahan is the new vet in town and is heating up all the ladies in Brady Hills. He s returned to his Texas roots from Virginia to start a new life and take over a thriving practice. The first day, he meets a gorgeous woman at the local feed and tack store, and is instantly smitten by her-cream and bronze cowboy boots and all. Zach is only interested in heating up the sheets with the one woman in Brady Hills who doesn t want anything to do with him. Or so he thinks. The temperature rises in Texas as the heat between Charlie and Zach reaches the boiling point while they struggle to break down the barriers surrounding their hearts and allow the healing to begin.
