Excerpt: .said one thing, Dr. Hart another, and he another; and, since the discussion had commenced, two or three mathematicians had suggested other formulae. Should gun-making stand still until mathematicians had determined the right algebraical expression? He had great respect for mathematicians, but he agreed with Dr. Siemens that mathematics, while a good servant, might be a very bad master. All the formulae to which reference had been made were very well, if the values of the different letters could be obtained; but if those values were not ascertained by experimental data, the formulae were simply so much juggling with letters of the alphabet. Of course the Woolwich system was theoretically wrong, and no one knew that better than the constructors of the guns. But they were perhaps practically the best available in the present state of metallurgical knowledge. A hard steel tube was put inside,...

Reviews

Completely essential read publication. It is really basic but excitement in the fifty percent of the book. You will not really feel monotony at anytime of your respective time (that's what catalogues are for about in the event you ask me).
