WRITTEN FOR MY DEAR COUSINS AT FECKHAM, ON OCCASION OF THE DECEASE OF THEIR FATHER, WILLIAM CASH. Who Wab Taken Oft By Cholera On The 6th or Ninth Month, 1M9. twere nothing new or strange to tell How dear is Home to each and all--No pulse, but must responsive swell, When on the ear its praises fall: Whoeer thou art, thy childhoods place Hath charms none other can efface. But our bright home! Oh! never smiled On infant gaze such home as ours, With joys on joys reduntant piled, Thick as the lap of spring with flowers. The very shrine of love and rest, By every passing stranger blest. What was it made that home so fair Not blazing hearth or stately lawn--Nay--but the fond parental care That watched us from our beings dawn; The Fathers smile, the Mothers kiss--These filled their childrens...
