The Boston Girl Diaries Volume 1 - December 25, 1888 - May 1889. This (and all future volumes of The Boston Girl Diaries ) is the first of many personal diaries of Katharine Camilla Buchanan who, in December of 1888, is 13 years old and living a very privileged life with her parents and three younger brothers at: 320 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, Massachusetts. Katharine loves to write in great detail about clothing that she both observes and wears, and books and magazine articles that she has read. Art works and plays that she has seen also receive wonderful commentary. Refreshingly, in my opinion, communication in 1888/89 was by written letter and by also making frequent visits with friends and relatives. Telephone conversation was not even a reality. No television, no internet, no cell phones. Travel was by horse, horse carriages and trains. January 1, 1889 saw the dawn of the first electric horse cars in Boston and Katharine was one of the first patrons to ride on them, an experience that she also writes about...
