Excerpt from The Mississippi River: Its Hydraulics, Value, and Control If the volume of water were constant it is plain that the river would soon have a current of great regularity, because the deposit dropped in a wide part of the river lessens the capacity of the channel there by shoaling it and re-establishes the proper velocity of current, and thus stops further deposit at that place, whilst at the contracted channel the scour soon enlarges the passage and consequently reduces the current, and thus further scour ceases at that point.
