George Naryshkin draws from his years of study in embryology and geology in college, and anatomy from dental school. He also spent years in the Air Force as a jet pilot and Red cross volunteer as a dentist. This background, along with years of literature research have given him special insight into why we do what we do, based on evolution. He delves into why humans have beliefs and why the instinct to follow beliefs is so strong. Do you use your awareness intelligence in your every day life? Or do you simply follow your instincts? Are we humans really acting in intelligent ways, or are we just a continuation of the forces of nature as observed in our actions of reproduction and consumption? Are we not much more than bacteria with larger brains? Read this and have an adventure into your reality. You will never look at your peers, nor your beliefs in the same way again.
