THE FLORIST, FRUITIST, AND GARDEN MISCELLANY, 1854 (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Florist, Fruitist, and Garden Miscellany, 1854 Lancifolium section. The plants have now reached a stage in their growth when their beauty will increase, as their blooms are successively unfolded. During the time they are in bloom they may occupy various situations: an entrance - hall or lobby; the drawing-room, or under the protection of a veranda; in each situation they will not fail to be universally admired, for the display of glowing crimson (in various tints) contrasted with the purest white in the same flower, or with white alone in others; while their graceful habit and the elegance of their lance-shaped leaves, combine in forming a plant of surpassing loveliness. Lilium eximium, and its ally, longiflorum, are plants of humbler growth, and of less pretensions than the others; but the snowy whiteness and delicate fragrance of their flowers render them no less attractive in their way. When the flowers decay the plants should be removed to the foot of a south wall, or some situation fully exposed to the sun, to assist the ripening of the shoots; water must now be given sparingly, and as the shoots and leaves become yellow, the pots may be laid on their sides; or if the pit or frame in which they are to winter is at liberty, place them in it, fully exposing them to light, and merely protecting them from wet. When the ripening process is fully complete (known by the shoots dying down to the soil), the bulbs may be repotted when there is time; but the sooner this is done after they are fully ripe, the stronger will they bloom the following year. In potting the second year, proceed...
