Fred Hughes entered the University of Cincinnati by competitive academic scholarship. The US Air Force was offering flight training and an offer of a rating to two-year math/science majors. Hughes was accepted into flight school in Waco, Texas, but a growing conviction against murder forced him to abandon that offer. He graduated at UC with a five-year degree in mechanical engineering and took his first professional employment with Mullins Manufacturing Corporation. They were building a manufacturing plant for the US Navy to produce 105 mm shells by coldextrusion for the Navy's four-inch guns. During this time, study with a former pastor from western Pennsylvania answered serious philosophical questions for Hughes that evolution did not address. Hughes decided to resign his engineering post and enrolled in an undergraduate program in a small missionary college in Takoma Park, Maryland, after studying with the pastor for a year. That same year, he was accepted to study theology at Potomac University in Washington, DC, even though his undergraduate work was in math and science rather than...
