Excerpt: . chapter ii. exigencies and fatal consequences ob the botal wab--the bepublicans. In the Genesis of facts Logic is inexorable; nor can it be falsified either by the Utopias of Moderates, or by the calculations of an oblique policy. In politics, as in every thing else, a principle inevitably involves a system, a series of consequences, a progression of applications, easy to be foreseen by any one with common sense. Every theory has a corresponding practice. And reciprocally, if the generating principle of a fact be falsified or betrayed in its application, that fact is irrevocably condemned to disappear, to perish without development, an unaccomplished programme, an isolated page in the history of a people, prophetic for the future, but sterile in its immediate consequences. For having forgotten this truth, the Italian movement of 1848 ought to have failed, and did fail. The Italian...
