Is there to be no effort this term to enlist a new choir? A new one, understand. Junior exhibitions we judge are to become things of the past, from the fact that University Chapel is rapidly assuming the form of several new recitation-rooms; a movement necessitated, we imagine, by the increased number in the classes in late years. 68 is excepted. Winter seems to think the lap of Spring a comfortable resting-place, if we may judge from the lingering looks of the former. The state of the paths in the yard after the late storm show that the engineer of the snow-plough has pretty indefinite ideas on the subject of straight lines. He most probably never studied Puckle, and is content with his knowledge of lines in general, including those he holds when driving his horses, to say nothing of the winding element he introduces, as shown by the serpentine character of the paths. Mr. Phelps would call the earnest attention of Seniors to his circular in relation to Biographies, and particularly to the assessment voted by the Class at the Class meeting, mention of which was crowded out of the columns of our last issue. Complaints reach us of rather a strong character, against the new grates that have been introduced into some rooms since last term. They are rather Grayish in...
