I was then carried away and put into a larger dish, where to my surprise I met sixty-five of my brethren who came with me first to the bank. I asked of my fellows why the blackfellow refused me, and I was offered as a loan to the Lord. I then found out the reason why I was despised as being less than a nobbler--I was Consbeoation Monet. PROLOGUE: IN AID OF THE SCHOOL OF AKTS BUILDING. 1st June, 1863. O-NIGHT our Elocution Class appears, Disdainful of the fate which critic s sneers Sometimes overwhelm the very best intentions; But, as we openly avow that our pretensions Are with becoming modesty enshrouded, We trust that, being unused to houses crowded Nightly, in sock and buskin, scenes to chronicle In the great art and science histrionical, Our awkward diffidence, or want of ease, Will amply compensate by our desire to please. This Temple of the Arts in which we meet, The Muses fair abode, and learning s seat, At once the pride and glory of our town, Beared o er gaunt Ignorance to cast its frown, Demands yet further tribute from our purse Ere we are freed from stern Minerva s curse. The solid structure of its inner walls Bears forth the echo of Art s rigid calls, And points out sternly its required want--The Muses garniture, a classic front. Keeping this favourable desire...
