*Completely essential read book. I could possibly comprehend every little thing using this written e book. You wont sense monotony at any moment of your own time (that's what catalogues are for relating to if you ask me).

Excerpt from More Translations From the Chinese This book is not intended to be representative of Chinese literature as a whole. I have chosen and arranged chronologically various pieces which interested me and which it seemed possible to translate adequately. An account of the history and technique of Chinese poetry will be found in the Introduction to my last book. Learned reviewers must not suppose that I have failed to appreciate the poets whom I do not translate. Nor can they complain that the more famous of these poets are inaccessible to European readers; about a hundred of Li Po's poems have been translated, and thirty or forty of Tu Fu's. I have, as before, given half my space to Po Ch-i, of whose poems I had selected. For translation a much larger number than I have succeeded in rendering. I will give literal versions of two rejected ones: Evening (A. D. 835) Waters colour at-dusk still white; Sunsets glow in-the-dark gradually nil. Windy lotus shakes (like) broken fan; Wave-moon stirs (like) string (of) jewels. Crickets chirping answer one another; Mandarin-ducks sleep, not alone. Little servant repeatedly announces night; Returning steps still hesitate. 170 Chinese Poems. Constable, 1918.
