Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 126 pages. A malicious network attack on a traffic management system in California causes the deaths of eight innocent people. Yvonne Tran, a former black hat computer hacker and now part of a secret government agency called CyberCom, is called in to investigate. Her handler and former lover, Rohan Stokes, and executives at Network Systems, the company that made the computer server, have no idea how the system could have been commandeered so completely, or how many other critical systems have been infiltrated. Once, Yvonne had what seemed to be the perfect life: the daughter of a Russian diplomat and a woman from a prominent Vietnamese family, she was raised in privilege, and was sent to all the best schools. But abuse at the hands of her Russian kin drove her from the future her parents had charted for her. She turned inwards, to the world of computers and hacking. She made a spectacular living breaking into the online systems of companies and governments, and turned her exploits into luxury condos, cars and clothes until Stokes caught her. He would have had her sent to prison, but he fell in love with her, and made a deal where she would work for him and CyberCom instead. Yvonne disassembles the server and discovers a rogue microchip has been planted in the motherboard, creating a backdoor, through which unauthorized parties can achieve control. She pings the chip, but the trail stops in Hong Kong, at the heavily guarded Cathay Computer Works. The only way to pursue the case further is to go to China and try to hack into Cathay's network. She joins up with aircraft repo specialist Buck Ryan and his team for the trip, who will provide her with transportation and security. Stokes abandons his post at...
