Forgotten Books, United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Contributor, Vol. 1: June, 1880 Near the middle of the present month we will notice, just after sunset, the new moon, making its appearance in the west in the shape of a crescent with its sharp horns turned away from the sun, or its convex or rounded side turned towards it. The next evening it will appear somewhat higher and also a little larger, and so it will continue to increase in size for about two weeks, when we shall see it rise as the full moon, in that quarter of the heavens directly opposite to the point where the sun sets. After this we shall have to wait until the sun sets before we can see the moon rise, and so on later each evening, until it finally rises so late that to see it we must get up early in the morning just before sunrise. During this time it has also been decreasing in size until we at last see it in the shape of a crescent again, with its horns turned from the sun as before, but also turned to the west, just the opposite of their former position. After this, a day or two, the moon will make its appearance in the west again in the shape of a crescent, and will go through the same changes as before, occupying a period of about one month.
