By Gloria Kay

CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 174 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.4in. A man appears on a family's front porch in the middle of the night, battered and bloodied, and loses consciousness. The family takes him in and calls for help. The local sheriff and doctor both respond and eventually discover that the man has no memory of who he is or where he is from. As Rob recovers from his injuries he begins to work on the farm with the others, proving that he is no stranger to hard work. He is a quick learner and not afraid to pitch in. As time goes on, his memory continues to evade him, except for odd impressions. As a thank-you to the Riley family for everything they have done for him, he decides to use the money the sheriff found to do some day-trading in the stock market and try get enough money to do a few things for the family. The first thing he does is talk to Jesse, the son, about getting a computer so Rob can do the day-trading, and to use Jesse's bank account to build the money. Jesse...
