The heigjith of this.tower is fifty-three seet, and. the breadth fifty-four; two sides of it are broke. down, and on one corner, still remaining, are the evident marks of violence made by the cannon shot fired against it. What still remains of this tower is fo well built, and strongly cemented, that it seems to promise a long duration. There is alfo the remains of one other entrance into the castle on the East side, where the. grooves of the portcullis are yet discernable betwixt twa semi-circular pillars. These pillars and two others next the river, of beautiful workmanship, seem to have been the work of later times, and evidently meant as buttresses to strengthen the ancient wall. Behind theCourt-House, at a sewyards distance, is the remains of an arched suhteraneous passage from thence into the moat: This no doubt was very useful...
