Excerpt from A Treatise on Internal Diseases of the Eyes, Including Diseases of the Iris, Crystalline Lens, Choroid Retina, and Optic Nerve: Based on Theodore J. Rueckert's Clinical Experience in Homeopathy I feel confident, that I have not undertaken an unnecessary labor, in my attempt to furnish a series of manuals upon the diseases of almost every organ of the body. At least, it has happened very frequently to me during the fifteen years, which I have devoted to the study and practice of Homeopathy, that I have painfully suffered for the want of just such treatises as I am endeavoring to supply. Rueckert's pains-taking collection of cases forms the very best basis for them; and to supply the rest I have but to put myself in the position of a faithful observer of nature and an earnest student of the best authorities in medicine.
