Afford has also a moral application: nothing affords so great a scope for ridicule as the follies of fashion; religion is the only thing that can afford true consolation and peace of mind in the season of affliction and the hour of death.--Afford also carries with it the idea of deducting from one s property with convenience; there are few so destitute, that they cannot afford something for the relief of others who are more destitute. Crahb. Affront is doubtless contracted from ad frontem stare, to stand front to front. The word affront was employed formerly to denote simply a meeting, face to face; hut it now implies to meet in an hostile manner, to offer an open insult. Aggravate, aggravo, (gravo, I make heavy, ) I make very heavy hy adding to. Aggravate is used only in a moral acceptation; the crime of rohery is aggravated hy any circumstances of cruelty. Aggregate, aggrego, grex, gregis, a flock; ducere, to lend, heing understood;) 1 lead to the flock; I gather together. Aggression, aggredior, (see Gradus, ) I step to; I advance against another, as foe against foe. Thus, one who gives another cau3e for quarrel is said to he the agressor. Allege, or alledge, allego, (see Leco, ) I send to; I state hy way of excuse, or proof. Allegiance, alligation, ailigo, (see Lego, ) I hind to. Allegiance is applied to the tie or hond of fidelity, hy...
