How can you say so, Charles retorted Mrs. Radclyffe, who, however, had been awoke by that same snore. Im not thinking of being asleep. On the contrary, Ive been thinking, as I sat here in my comfortable chair, in this charming room, by this nice fire, how sad it is for those poor Seymours having to leave their beautiful place and go and live in a nasty, poky house in London. Upon my word, so it is! I suppose the poor devils have hardly anything to live onVery little; the mother has two hundred a year, I think, which the creditors cant touch, and that with whatever Ralph earns, is all they have. Humph! I dont much fancy that Mr. Ralph. A selfish dog! all he gets hell keep for himself. I hate that fellow!Mr. Radclyffe hated most people. It was...
