Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2012. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . The question dominates global news and stalks the streets and alleys of towns and cities around the world. The masses pray; others laugh, nervously. Why? Well, what if God were to. Ah, telling now would spoil the surprise in store for the reader! Instead let s ask: when it comes to the idea of God what s your belief? Every individual is a believer, atheist or agnostic. Indeed, some believers are orthodox defenders of their faith and would willingly die for it, and do; some atheists are determined anti-theists actively seeking to convert people of faith to atheism. On the balance of faith and reason - what some would call the balance of heart and mind or of the secular and the religious - where do you stand? For many people, belief in God or lack of it is shaped, not by independent conscious choice, but by the cultural environment they are born into and the religious dogma and practices or otherwise of their families and peers. Lacking the motivation - and in many instances having to submit and conform in the face of penalties for non-belief and non-adherence - many believers never research or reflect in any depth on other religions; they shy away from exploring the arguments put forth for non-belief in a Supreme Being, the soul and salvation. Around the world, people live and die under the strictures and blows of religious extremists. Employing an original fiction and referencing many highly respected, wide-ranging and contemporary science and religious sources (including Richard Dawkins, The God Delusion; Roger Penrose, Shadows of the Mind; Gregg Braden, The God Code; Elaine Pagels, The Gnostic Gospels; Charles Darwin, The Origin of...
