Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Geography of New Zealand: Historical, Physical, Political, and Commercial Dr. H. R. Mill, in a paper on the scope of Geography has lately given the following definition: - Geography is the science that deals with the forms of relief of the earth s surface and with the influence that these forms exercise on the action of all other phenomena. The origin and development of the forms of relief must first be considered, and the influence that they have exerted upon the distribution of the areas of land and water, thus embracing the branch often known as physical geography. Next follows a consideration of their effects upon the circulation of the atmosphere and upon the radiation of solar energy that reaches them. All of this is embraced in the consideration of climate. The distribution and nature of plants and animals is evidently dependent, in the main, upon the nature and distribution of these forms of relief and on the climate that they influence. Also, in conjunction with the distribution of mineral deposits, they determine the areas of human occupation and the nature of the industries that are maintained. Finally, the consideration of the industries leads naturally to an account of the political institutions by which the population is governed, and the commercial arrangements by which the products of the industries can be brought to a market. It was with the idea of describing New Zealand, according to the spirit of the new Geography, that this book was written. Professor Gregory, the editor of the series of State Geographies, has contributed the Introduction and a chapter on the Geysers. The views stated by him are not...
