Excerpt from The Chinese on the Plain of Shinar, or a Connection Established Between the Chinese and All Other Nations Through Their Theology No one who takes the trouble to investigate the various Mythological systems of the Heathen world, can fail to be struck with the very remarkable similarity which exists between them. To account for this similarity is an interesting, and, at first sight, a difficult undertaking. The Pagan world may be regarded in two points of view, viz either before their dispersion at Babel, when the several nations were in embryo and the human race formed one community on the plain of Shinar; or, after the dispersion, when this community, broken up into various tribes, scattered over the face of the earth, and colonized the various regions of the world. With regard then to the striking similarity which exists between the different systems of Pagan Idolatry, the first question for consideration is this - Is the similarity mentioned of such a nature as to be easily and naturally accounted for on the supposition that after the dispersion, and subsequent to their settlement, each nation (including the Chinese) independently of all the rest, adopted a system of theology which nevertheless coincided in many particulars with all the others? There is no doubt that this theory will, to a certain extent, account for the resemblance alluded to. For instance, no one who contemplates the sun, the dispenser of light and heat, who nourishes the earth with his genial warmth; the moon walking in brightness and the stars, which with subdued light, wander through infinite ethereal space, can fail to be struck with, and to admire the beauty of...
