Excerpt from Co-Operative Production: Address to the Annual Conference of the Co-Operative Societies, Held at Halifax Here I may appropriately observe that the absence of large employers of labour on occasions such as this should not be construed, as if it implied any want of interest in our proceedings, or unwillingness to take trouble to promote the advancement of the manufacturing population. The true interpretation is to be found in the exceeding pressure, to which, in the keen competition of industry and commerce in the present day, every man of business is inevitably subjected. Every moment of his time, all his powers bodily and mental, are exhausted in the race; and the task of aiding and encouraging the self-helping efforts of the people, a task, in which I venture to say most employers would, if they could, most gladly take their part, must of necessity remain in the hands of their more fortunate brethren, who have leisure to devote to social and philanthropic work.
