CHAPTER XVI / thank your Grace for your comprehension of an unspoken thing Through the passing of two years Osmonde s foot did not press English soil again, and his existence during that period was more vivid and changeful than it had ever been before. He saw Ramillies follow Blenheim, great Marlborough attain the height of his renown, and French Louis s arrogant ambitions end in downfall and defeat. Life in both camp and court he knew at its highest tension, brilliant scenes he beheld, strange ones, wicked ones, and lived a life so eventful and full of motion and excitement, that there were few men who through its picturesque adventures would have been like to hold in mind one image and one thought. Yet this he did, telling himself that twas the thought which held him, not he the thought, it having been proven in the past twas one which would not have released him from its dominion even had he been inclined to withdraw himself from it. And this he was not. Nature had so built him that on the day when he had found himself saying, In two years time I will come back to Gloucestershire and see what time has wrought, he had reached a point from which there was no retreating. Through many an hour in time past there had been turmoil in his mind, but, in a measure at least, this ended the uncertainties, and was no...
