Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Poems and Tales The daylight is fading, and the tired mowers leave their toil and wend their way homewards; though they slowly move along, yet they catch the sacred procession, and just then the full moon shines. They bow before the reverend fathers the young man shudders, and well he may, for the High Priest, with solemn and stentorian voice, commands the workmen and the chanting choir to stop, and with ominous utterance declares before the moon shall rise to morrow s eve the Gods demand a sacrifice, and fixing his eyes of steel upon the youth with the downcast look, ex claims The Gods last night did mark thee with their favour. The chant rises in the air again; the young man, half conscious, is led within the group, and onward they march to the village. On that mother s sad heart I need not linger, or how she wept that night, and lived another life of sorrow through before the morning, though that night seemed like a mo ment. Though the morning sun rises with all its mid summer splendour, yet she sees it not; though the birds whistle in the orchard, she hears them not; all the village is alive and gay, yet she sees it not, for this is the last day she shall see her darling boy, her pride, her hope, her joy, her defender, for she is husbandless, and she will soon be childless.
