Excerpt: . . . man not possessed of a large fortune. and insinuating manners. Such an one did not readily offer, and, at the age of twenty-eight, Emily retained the name of Chace. Of late years she had declined in her pretensions; but the perfections of her successive suitors had declined in the same ratio. Old maids were Emilys aversion, and she was resolved not to continue a member of the sisterhood. . She began to look about in good earnest, when Mr. Marvin was introduced to her society. She made enquiries concerning him, and was informed, that his fortune was at least equivalent to her own, and that he was a rising man. . This will do, said she, I will set my cap for him. Her figure was small and slender, and her complexion fair, which made her appear several years younger than she really was...
