And, at the same time, I want particularly to mention the necessity for correcting the lack of cooperation on our part with the craftsmen, mechanics and others employed upon buildings. In this connection the American Federation of Labor maintains a Building Trades Department, composed of 19 organizations known as Internationals, with local branches, in different parts of the country covering the various industries that pertain to building construction. These concern themselves, among other things which we ought to know more about, with methods of safety in construction and the use of building materials. Other organizations exist whose chief function is to make for safety in all the industries and in all walks of life. Among these are the National Safety Council, the American Museum of Safety, the Workmens Compensation Service Bureau, with the valuable work and publications of all of which we would do well to familiarize ourselves. The National Education Association is another one of the bodies which is working for the safety of occupants in buildings. Our Committee on Standardized Measurements for School Buildings has already been in touch with the National Education Association, which has a Committee on Standardization of School House Construction and Planning, of which an architect is the chairman, and he is not a member of the Institute. It seems...
