Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.DEAD TIDE Synopsis by: Alvin Leaphart TRACCO, a chlorine and caustic manufacturer which uses mercury in its production process, pumps several thousand tons of sludge containing mercury into a creek which runs into Turtle River, near Brunswick, Georgia. Turtle River is a major sport and commercial fishing area. An environmental catastrophe occurs. People who live along the waterway begin to get sick from mercury poisoning. A number of infants begin to show neurological defects. Clyde Darsey, the plant manager, and Franklin Perry, his maintenance superintendent, begin to embezzle from the company. They allow machinery and equipment to run down from lack of maintenance and spare parts, and begin to ride their creditors. Their goal is to dispose of the company's assets, misappropriate a large sum of cash and abscond. Several hourly employees begin to show symptoms of mercury poisoning. A whistle blowing chemist is murdered after he discovers the pollution and removes incriminating documents which implicate Darsey and Perry in the scheme. In an effort to recover the documents, an attempt is made on the life of the chemist's widow, Ann, who escapes to Shellman Bluff where she is taken in by Alex Bosche on his 80-foot schooner. Alex, his black friend and retainer Elijah, Ann, the chemist's widow; Amber, a black deputy sheriff; and Joe, a retired cop from New Jersey, formulate a plan to slip into the plant for the purpose of securing additional evidence. During the break-in, a shootout occurs, and they escape to sea. They are pursued by a rogue named Morris and a group of mercenaries. Ann and Alex become romantically involved. Jason Gibbs, a St. Simons real estate tycoon, buys...
