Not illustrated. 1883 Excerpt: .he was pretty well acquainted not only with the road to Peel, and nearly every other inch of the island, but also, being observant, the peculiarities and eccentricities of excursionists in general, whom I could see he knew well how to humour and to amuse. In fact, he was what is generally termed a knowing card, and just the sort of fellow to make the time pass merrily on during a long ride. Like the ever-to-be-remembered Sam Weller in Pickwick, he had quite a stock of witty sayings, and a fund of repartee, and numerous short anecdotes to tell as we went along, some of which at times caused the elders of our party to look seriously at him, not because they verged on the immoral in the least, but because they sometimes dealt in exaggeration just a little. CHAPTER VI. UR driver had also another...
