

The Church in Ireland: A Second Chapter of Contemporary History (Classic Reprint) (Paperback)

By Thomas Andrews

Forgotten Books, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from The Church in Ireland: A Second Chapter of Contemporary History Protestant Church, the Bishop of Oxford lately declared in the House of Lords, that St. Patrick was the son of one married clergyman, and the grandson of another. He ought in candour to have added, that the only authorities on the subject are wholly at variance. In the confession, St. Patrick describes himself as the son of a deacon, who was himself the son of a presbyter in the Epistle to Coroticus, he says that he is of gentle birth according to the esh, his father a decurion, and that, for the sake of others, he sold his nobility. The name of Patricius, as well as the popular legends, are favourable to the latter statement. I do not wish, at the same time, to attach any undue importance to either of these documents. A recent writer has attempted to alter the barbarous texts, so as to bring the language of the Confession into agreement with that of the epistle but with little success. The opinion of the learned Ledwich,...

READ ONLINE
[ 7.81 MB ]

Reviews

Basically no terms to clarify. It can be written in basic terms instead of difficult to understand. I am easily could get a enjoyment of reading through a composed publication.

-- Dr. Hazel Ziemann IV

This book is so gripping and fascinating. Of course, it is actually perform, still an interesting and amazing literature. You will not feel monotony at anytime of your respective time (that's what catalogs are for about in the event you request me).

-- Prof. Ophelia Wiegand I