Reviews

This ebook will be worth acquiring. It is actually written in basic phrases instead of hard to understand. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

STREAMLINING INFORMATION SERVICES USING CHATBOTS (PAPERBACK)

American Library Association, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. The most common questions coming to your library by IM or Chat, such as inquiries about location, hours, policies, or patron access to specific material, can all be answered by a chatbot, saving valuable staff time. A chatbot effectively creates a natural language processing interface to your catalogue and databases, providing answers to library users by structuring language to a database s requirements. David Newyear developed the award-winning Emma the Catbot and, with co-author Michele McNeal, implemented it at the Mentor Public Library. He has since transformed it into an open source virtual agent for libraries, infoTabby. This issue of Library Technology Reports presents dozens of code examples in AIML, an easy-to-learn markup language for anyone familiar with XML or HTML, enabling you to start simple, with a virtual agent that can answer FAQs and build toward a natural conversation. This report offers guidance on such topics asCreating a simple working chatbot with a small number of AIML tagsSample coding for answering the basic library-hours questionsHow to use Javascript to pass a query to a third-party database, such as Encyclopedia BritannicaFree and premium services from Pandorobot to experiment with or implement a free virtual assistant for AndroidImplementation ideas, from text-only catalogue enhancement to kiosks.
