Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Half-Hours of Travel at Home and Abroad The world is growing very narrow in these late nineteenth century days. In place of the crawling slowness of former travel, the steamship and steam-railway now fairly hurl travellers over the face of the earth, while by aid of the far-extending wire we are able to talk freely with our neighbors of the antipodes. From Dan to Beersheba has now become from New York to New South Wales, or from Chicago to Hong-kong. And yet this growing neighborliness does not decrease, but rather redoubles, our interest in the scenes and people of foreign lands. Nature retains her variety, nor is man's unity much increased by his growing propinquity. Tropic and Arctic lands are as far apart in condition as ever; Europe differs from Asia, America from Africa, as greatly as of yore; man still presents every grade of development, from the lowest savagery to the highest civilization; and our interest in the marvels of nature and art, the variety of plant and animal life, and the widely varied habits and conditions, modes of thought and action, of mankind, is not likely soon to lose its zest.
